WHY IS IT CALLED IRISH COFFEE?

It all started in 1943 when chef Joe Sheridan prepared it to comfort passengers on a flight grounded due to bad weather.

The name is said to derive from Sheridan's response to an American passenger who, asking if the coffee was Brazilian, heard:
“No, he’s Irish.”

10 years later, Irish Coffee became famous beyond the national borders when Stanton Delaplane, a journalist for the San Francisco Chronicle, tasted it at the same airport, and then requested it at the Buena Vista Café in San Francisco upon his return.
